The court imposed a fine of $10. An appeal was taken from the decision of the court and bond was fixed at $50.

The case arose out of a collision between a car driven by Miss Evelyn Thompson, daughter of C. M. Thompson of Willimantic, and a car driven by Haynes. The accident took place at the intersection of Jay and Huntington streets just one week ago. The defense argued that the case was one for civil action and not one that belonged in the criminal court as Haynes had not willfully violated the motor vehicle law. The defense also alleged that the case was being brought before the court at the instigation of an insurance adjuster.

who held the insurance on the Thompson car. Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin denied this and stated that the state of Connecticut was acting as the prosecutor in the matter and acting on evidence presented by the state police.

The defense also brought out that the complaining witnesses in the case, Miss Evelyn Thompson, not only was obligated by law to keep to the right of the road but that if it was not sufficient to avoid the accident, she was also obligated to do everything humanly possible to avert the collision, even to the extent of turning out of the right of way of it was possible to avoid the collision in any other manner.
